Plan To Put 80,000 Illinois Men To Work Monday

WEATHER MAN HOLDS LITTLE RELIEF HOPE

Death List Mounting; Abandon Search For Freighter's Crew

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The cold wave from the north country today continued to much of the North American continent in its grip, bringing with it a slowly mounting death list while bbbbbbhhrd shr dshrdhrlur the storm-tossed North-Atlantic imperilled shipping.

The weather man, meanwhile held out little hope for relief today from the frigid blast which affected the entire country east of the Rocky Mountains, after recording new lows for this time of the year in various parts of the midwest, including five below at Bemidji, Minn. Parts of the east were also hard hit.

Deaths Reported

Pennsylvania counted a total of six dead during the past two days with a new storm sweeping the northwestern section of the state, already buried under a heavy snow fall. Two hunters died in Ohio from over-exertion, and the frigid blasts brought suffering to island inhabitants in Lake Erie, caught short of fuel.

One death from exposure was reported in St. Paul. Detroit shivered with 8 above zero, and thousands of homeless sought shelter in Chicago, which broke a fifty year record for Nov. 15, with 10 above zero yesterday.

Fears that the death list would be increased by the loss of two Coast Guardsmen in a potted boat on Lake Superior were dissipated when they were reported safe on Madeline Island.

Abandon Search For 24, Stricken Freighters' Crew

Valentia, Irish Free State, Nov. 16.—(AP)—The S. S. Manchester Regiment abandoned her 24-hour search for the stricken freighter Saxby today shortly after the great liner Berengaria and the Dutch steamer Boschdyk were forced to quit their rescue efforts.

Abandonment of the quest by the Manchester Regiment was announced in a wireless message in which the ship reported she had sighted no wreckage and was afraid it was absolutely impossible for lifeboats to survive such weather as she was encountering.

With the Manchester Regiment's withdrawal from the scene, hope was generally abandoned for the little cargo ship and her human freight of 27 souls.

Storm Is Only Hope

The only hope that the men might still be alive was based on the storm which may have killed them; the high wind may have driven the lifeboats and their parent ship far from the spot where the Saxby sent out her last distress call.

It was toward this position, about 30 miles off the Irish coast, that rescue efforts were directed.

Early in the morning, two vessels reported they had found no trace of the Saxby at the spot where she last was reported struggling against a terrific Atlantic storm.

Nor, they added in wireless messages to coastal stations, did they locate any trace of the crew, reported to have deserted the stricken freighter many hours before.

The vessels which wirelessed from the scene were the Boschdyk

Inflation Of Currency Soon Is Expected To Result From Woodin Retirement From Secretaryship

Retiring Secretary Was Known To Be For Sound Money

Washington, Nov. 16.—(AP)—A new Cabinet officer who says he will give unwavering support to President Roosevelt's gold-buying plan, and who is a close friend of a leading commodity dollar advocate, takes full control tomorrow of the Treasury.

But officials continued to deny vigorously that the designation of Henry Morgenthau, Jr., as Undersecretary and the unlimited leave of absence granted to William H. Woodin, Secretary, meant any schism between the latter and the President.

Explanation Remains

The explanation remained that Woodin needed to go to Tucson, Arizona, in search of rest and health; that Dean Acheson, who had been Undersecretary, resigned simply to let Morgenthau take the second-ranking position in the Treasury so he could assume charge while Woodin was on leave.

Woodin asked to resign, giving health as the reason and adding that "every policy" of the President "has had and still has my devoted support." Roosevelt turned down the resignation, proposed the leave and said, "we need you back again."

Inflation Due Soon?

Despite this exchange, there were those in the Capitol who saw the developments as meaning there was a rift between the Secretary, who once exhibited a 5,000,000 German mark note when asked about inflation, and the President. These same individuals added that inflation would be along soon.

Morgenthau, now head of the Farm Credit Administration, is a close friend of Professor George F. Warren, an originator of the present effort to force commodity prices up through government purchases of foreign and domestic gold. Warren also argues continually for the so-called commodity dollar whose gold content would be changed as natural, or other forces raised or lowered the prices of commodities.

College Man Promoted

Roosevelt today designated Wm. J. Myers, the Deputy Governor of the Farm Credit Administration, to succeed Morgenthau, as the Governor.

Myers will take office as soon as Morgenthau is sworn in tomorrow as the Undersecretary of the Treasury.

Myers, a former Professor of Agriculture Economics at Cornell University, was brought to Washington by Morgenthau as his first Assistant.

Funeral Of Mrs. William Cramer To Be Held Tomorrow

Mrs. William H. Cramer passed away Wednesday morning at 1:15 at the family residence, 1206 Seventh street after a lingering illness. She was born in Dixon, May 12, 1862, and had been a life long resident of this city. She was united in marriage to William H. Cramer, April 26, 1882. She leaves to mourn her passing: her husband and two children, son Ray Cramer and a daughter, Mrs. Robert Liven, one daughter Hazel having preceded her in death at the age of three years. Four grandchildren, John and Dale Cramer, Grace and Mary Ellen Liven, two sisters, Mrs. Mary Greer, Mrs. Mary Brown and one brother, William C. Jones and several nieces and nephews also survived.

Funeral services will be conducted from the family residence Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. J. Frank Young, pastor of the Presbyterian church officiating, and with interment in Oakwood.

Crowd-Crush Theory In Death Of Patron At Game Discarded

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 16.—(AP)—The theory that Jay F. Towne was killed in the crush of a football crowd appeared headed for discarding today, but the strange death of the young Marylander remained as much a campus mystery as ever.

County officials found their crowd-crush death theory controverted by new evidence supplied by two unnamed undergraduates who said they spoke to Towne after the game some distance away from the stadium ramp entrance.

Coroner Frank Grove said the investigation would proceed "from this new angle" of the students' evidence, but would not say that he had abandoned the crowd-death theory. The Coroner likewise declined to indicate whether he would take up the hit-and-run auto accident belief held by Towne's family and friends.

Towne is being held by Chicago authorities in connection with recent kidnap plots.

Miami Politician Sticks To His Story Of Plot To Kidnap a Granddaughter of Late Mayor of Chicago

Miami, Fla., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Despite denials of the story from the child's mother, Dade County authorities today pushed an investigation into an alleged plot to kidnap the granddaughter of the late Mayor Anton Cermak of Chicago.

W. W. Wood, Miami politician in a sworn statement to County Solicitor Fred Pine said the alleged kidnappers demanded a total of $63,000 under threats to kidnap three-year-old Mary Alice Kenlay daughter of Mrs. Helen Cermak Kenlay of Chicago and later threatened to kill the child, its mother and himself.

Pine further quoted Wood as saying he had already paid the alleged kidnappers $8,000.

From Chicago Mrs. Kenlay denied her child had been threatened and said the story sounded like "attempts of some one to gain publicity." She said she had not paid any extortion money and that the whole thing sounded like "a joke."

Pine made public Wood's statement when he filed an information in Circuit Court charging Gale Swolley with attempting to extort $13,000 from Wood and with attempting to kill him.

Swolley is being held by Chicago authorities in connection with recent kidnap plots.

Desperado Eludes Chicago Police

HEAD OF BAND OF IND. BANK BANDITS FLEES

Carefully Laid Plans Of Officers Went Awry Last Night

Chicago, Nov. 16.—(AP)—John Dillinger, desperado wanted as the leader of a band of Indiana bank robbers, vanished today after a daring escape from a carefully laid police net amid a fusillade of shots.

Samuel H. Feigley, mayor of Rock Falls and Spanish-American War veteran, was indicted late yesterday by a federal grand jury, sitting in Chicago, charged with violation of the federal income tax laws. He is charged with having reported a profit of $19,953.76 from stock manipulations in 1929 while the government says he should have scheduled a profit of $71,844.34. He paid income tax of $481.55 but should have remitted $7,671.02, the government says. An indictment was also returned against J. J. Lauer, a Chicago public accountant, who is alleged to have assisted the Rock Falls man to prepare his tax report. Bond for each was fixed at $10,000. The accused official has many friends among Dixon Spanish American War veterans.

Section Hand Is Questioned About Bridge Dynamiting

Chicago, Nov. 16.—(AP)—John Charles Savery, 55, of Woodbine, was retained today by Sheriff C. F. Cross railway agents and three state agents for questioning in connection with the dynamiting of two railway bridges last Friday.

Railway officials first attributed the blast, which damaged slightly an Illinois Central and a Chicago & Northwestern bridge, to activity in connection with the farm strike.

Savery, a section hand, was questioned by the C. & N. W. tracks on the night of the blast and reported it to authorities. He was taken to Council Bluffs today for questioning.

Estate Of Alleged Gangster Is Sued

Chicago—A claim for $11,554.25 and interest for unpaid income taxes was filed against the estate of Edgar Lebensberger, operator of the "225 Club," by Carter H. Harrison, Collector of Internal Revenue. Lebensberger committed suicide a few hours before a federal grand jury indicted him with others on Oct. 6 for a $250,000 mail robbery last year.

Police pursued him and frightened motorists drew to the left and right of the street as the bullets whizzed around them. Police said Dillinger lowered a window and drove with one hand while he fired a pistol at his pursuers with the other. The woman fired also as the car gained speed until police estimated it was going 85 miles an hour. The Chicago police were soon outdistanced but the Indiana machine kept the pace until the barrage of machine gun bullets splintered their windshield. Then they were forced to slow down and in a few minutes Dillinger, by a series of quick turns and cut-backs, was free.

Shortly afterward police rushed to a house on tip that a man believed to be either Dillinger or Verne Miller, the South Dakota outlaw who shot his way out of a similar trap laid by federal agents several weeks ago, was there. But it proved to be empty.

So today the $10,000 reward for the capture of Dillinger remained unclaimed.

Court's Order Is Not Applicable To Boards Of Review

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 16.—(AP)—Attorney General Otto Kerner has ruled the recent Supreme Court decision voiding the 15 per cent tax assessment cut ordered by the Cook County Board of Tax Appeals does not apply to the downstate county Board of Review.

In the Chicago case the Supreme Court held the Board of Tax Appeals were without power to order the decreased assessment. This caused inquiry from various counties as to the power of Boards of Review in ordering blanket assessments.

In an opinion given the State Tax Commission, the Attorney General said the court decision did not apply to downstate review boards and that such boards could order blanket assessment cuts even after budgets have been made by the various taxing bodies.

FAITH OF OUR MOTHERS (Tune: St. Catherine)

Faith of our mothers, hold it true,
As morning star in heaven's blue,

As peerless pearl from the ocean's bed,

As guiding light seen far ahead,

Faith of our mothers, blessed faith,

It shall be ours to hold till death.

Faith of our mothers, hold in trust
That which is true and pure and just,

Her loving thought and constant prayer,

For those held dear who leave her care,

Faith of our mothers, blessed faith

In holy hope, we'll hold till death,

Faith of our mothers, hold in love

This sacred treasure from above,

God grant it grace upon its way,

O'er wandering souls to hold its sway.

Triumphant, we'll hold till death,

Faith of our mothers, blessed faith

E. C. Smith P.T.A. Jitney Supper, Carnaval Friday Night

The E. C. Smith P. T. A. are having their annual Jitney Supper and Carnival Friday, November 17. Elaborate plans are under way to surpass all past affairs. The mothers are serving the Jitney supper from 5 to 7. A variety of appetizing food will be on the menu.

For the benefit of the uninitiated who are following the crowd this year the shows are about fifteen minutes long and are repeated throughout the evening.

The various grades have not only found much hidden ability but have borrowed from surrounding talent. The eighth grade are preparing a minstrel that Dixon can't afford to miss. A famous "Queen of Ivories" is helping Miss Barton shape the troupe into a great show.

Mrs. Riordan's seventh grade "Fashion Show" will be the talk for the year.

No carnival would be complete without vaudeville and Miss Hoffmann's sixth grade will bring the house down with her show. The all-star acts are waiting for your approval.

Miss Chandler's fifth grade "Fish Pond" has many things of value as well as treasures. The merchants have made it worth your while to fish.

The Museum ranging from the most sublime down to the ridiculous will be educational as well as amusing.

Miss Dodd's fifth grade have tabulated the many contributions of the school's friends. The photos of E. C. Smith alumni are always interesting. Come and see the Indian lore, early American, the curious and foreign.

A PROBLEM OF REPEAL STILL FACES US.

The confusion that some people expected to follow repeal of the eighteenth amendment seems already to have begun.

In most big cities the speakeasies have thrown off almost all pretense at concealment. Drug stores display packaged whisky openly on their counters, certain hotels and restaurants serve dinners with everything from cocktails to champagne, and in some places bars are running wide open on downtown streets.

This sort of thing, probably, was inevitable. There was bound to be a rebound from restraint, and the peculiar interim period between the death of the eighteenth amendment and the institution of new regulatory laws makes any very effective control of the traffic extremely difficult.

But most of all this reflects the confusion which is in the mind of the public as a whole regarding the next step.

We got rid of prohibition without ever getting any very clear idea about the set-up that we would adopt in its place. It may be that success in the repeal fight was too easy. The campaign could have been an educational affair, in which the public seriously devoted itself to study and discussion of the alternatives to prohibition. Instead, it resolved itself into a band wagon movement, in which a huge majority agreed that it wanted federal prohibition ended—but went no further than that.

So now we get—what? Chains of government liquor stores, selling in packages for off-premises consumption? A return to the old license system, modified in the light of the lessons that have been learned? Restriction on sale to hotels and restaurants?

We hardly have begun to make up our minds on these issues, and the time is just about at hand when one or another of them has to be put effect. We have plenty of chances to make mistakes, and we probably shall accept a good many of them.

What we need to remember is, first, that we want to find some way of avoiding both the evils of prohibition and the evils of the old license system—which were many and glaring; and, second, that whatever course we adopt now will be in the nature of an experiment.

We probably shan't hit on the right solution at once. It may be years before we find the best way out. Meanwhile, it is high time we did some very earnest and serious thinking.

THE PEOPLE ORDER.

The value of a referendum system, by which voters can lay their hands directly on an issue which their elected representatives refuse to tackle, is shown by Ohio's experience this fall with an old age pension law.

For years people had tried to put such a law through the state legislature. Time after time the legislators contemptuously snuffed it under. The battle went on for sixteen years and each time the law failed.

Finally, this year, fraternal, labor and church groups united to get signatures and have a referendum on the issue. The proposal came to a vote at the recent election—and carried by the overwhelming total of 1,386,107 votes to 526,055.

It is pretty clear that the legislature had been going directly against the strong majority sentiment of the state. But if it had not been for the referendum machinery, the voters would have been utterly helpless.

If labor does not act promptly, if it does not gain the support of working farmers, we virtually shall have surrendered America to a government of big business, by big business, and for big business.—Norman Thomas.

We live in this life in a state of fear. We're terrified of life and we're terrified of death.—Dr. George Draper, specialist to President Roosevelt.

A smart lawyer can shoot holes through any legislation Congress can enact.—U. S. Senator James Cauzens.

To put horror across I really have to feel horrible, and that is unpleasant.—Bela Lugosi, Hungarian actor.

America is a Titan still, but for the moment an exhausted Titan.—Prof. David P. Barrows of the University of California.

Taking it on the chin is the natural order of life.—Ben Turpin, comedian.

I wish it was only by book-burning that intolerance vented its madness.—H. G. Wells.

Kidnappers are rats. But a rat in a corner will fight.—Special Assistant Attorney-General Joseph B. Keenan.

If we do not pay for schools, we will pay for the jails.—Judge Florence E. Allen of Ohio.

READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE

Wee Goldy eyed the Thunder Man, and said, "Please tell me, if you can, just why you look so worried. Something is irritating you."

"Gee, don't you like the sky real bright? I think it is a very pretty sight. It won't be long until we'll see the sun come shining through."

"That is just the trouble! I am mad! I cannot see why old Blow had to come and spoil my thunder storm," the Thunder Man replied.

"I had rain water spraying very fast. I might have known it would not last. I like to have it dark and when it's light I run and hide!"

"Ha, ha! Ho, ho!" Old Blow laughed out. "You would like to have me leave no doubt, but I am going to stick around. You can't get rid of me."

"You want to fill the sky with noise, which only frightens girls and boys, while I bring out the friendly sun, a sight they like to see."

Then Blow began to blow some more, and soon the Tinies heard him roar, "At last I've round old Sol. He's peeking from behind a cloud."

"I will blow that cloud right out of sight. Then everything will be all right. To bring you Tinies rays of warmth will make me feel proud."

Soon, all the bunch let out a cheer, and Copy cried, "The sky is clear, and now the sun is smiling. It is very pleased, I guess."

"Hey, look, lads, at the Thunder Man!" The Tinies watched him as he ran toward his home, loudly shouting, "Oh, this is an awful mess!"

"The sun delights in scorching me. I must hide where I can't see. So long, you happy Tinies. Meeting you has been just grand."

And then he jumped, with all his might into his drum, right out of sight. "It won't be long," said Blow, "till he will be in slumberland."

(Old Blow gives the Tinies a treat in the next story.)

some technique, by which to escape from the rush of activity and stand by the still pools of thought, in which we may catch some reflection of our own souls and of the stars above us.

We must learn to be simple in the midst of subtlety, quiet in a din of noise, living a unified life in an age scattered, and peeled. Only so can we renew the clarity of our moral insights, and not lose, by going too fast, the thing that is worth living for.

The world itself is weary and needs a nap. If it could go to sleep for few years, like old Rio Van Winkle, it might wake up in a saner mood and a better spirit. But it cannot sleep. It is too nervous. Its life is too hectic, too noisy, jumpy and jerky for rest.

We who try to live in it ride on a dizzy whirligig, going at a giddy rate. Our life is a maddening merry-go-round, and we lose our breath, if not our wits, trying to keep up with it. It is a kaleidoscopic glitter, and its changes are too rapid, too radical for us.

The impact of materialized forces is overwhelming, and our spiritual nature is well nigh shattered by the shock. We are weighed upon by too many things. The white light of publicity is too white; we are dazzled and confused until our souls are weary and worn out.

Our modern brain-pans does not seem capable, as yet, of receiving, sorting, and storing the vast mass of facts poured into it. It is as if the wisdom of the infinite were trying to beat itself into tiny, finite minds. No wonder we have insomnia, melancholia, and all sorts of ills unknown to other ages. Our life is too complicated.

We need poise, peace, perspective, if we are not to lose all sense of proportion and wreck our inner life. We must find some art, devise well as an appropriation to maintain and increase that list.

Undoubtedly many of these books would be interesting to the adult readers of the community. There are about 150 volumes of standard high grade fiction, about 25 volumes of short story collections, almost 20 of biography ranging from George Washington, Lincoln, Theodore Roosevelt, to General Pershing, and the purely historical volumes number about 135. For those readers who lean toward the reading of history there are two sets of histories of the late World War—one written by the actual participants. In this latter set there are articles by English, French, Italian, German, Austrian, and of course American leaders. No doubt some of the local Legionnaires, and would be highly interesting to most other readers.

Space does not permit the publication here of titles of any more of the many interesting volumes on hand, so those who like to read are urged to visit the High School Library and become acquainted with what it has to offer. Any hour between 8 A. M. and 4 P. M. will be satisfactory. If enough people wish it some arrangement will be made so that books may be borrowed. There would, of course, be no charge of any kind. It is hoped that several will take advantage of the opportunity for free entertainment.

CHOOSING AN ALL-AMERICAN TEAM WILL BE BIG JOB

AP Sports Writers Begin To Nominate Selections

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Writer)
New York, Nov. 16.—(AP)—It's nearly ten years since the most famous exponent of the All-American Walter Camp, died, but there appears no less enthusiasm than ever in the rush now under way to paste the all-star football labels for 1933 on the standout players from coast to coast.

It's just an old American custom, the kind of an argument in which one and all can participate, whatever the complexities may be in attempting to name eleven men as the superiors to all the rest in a game played so widely and so well in all corners of the gridiron map. Its existence is sustained by custom and encouraged by popular demand.

The returns so far in the ninth annual Associated Press All-American consensus indicate observers have had more than usual difficulty making their choices and then making them stick. The competition seems to be so close and hard fought this year that there is little or no assurance that a star player will look like an All-American two weeks in a row. The ball carrier who runs will behind expert blockers one week and dashes mostly into the arms of opposing tacklers the next is giving the experts many a headache.

A Few Examples
Take a few examples: Cy Grant, the Georgia backfield star, came north heralded by many Dixie experts as the south's leading All-American candidate, yet it was his running mate, Homer Key, who starred in the Yale Bowl. Mike Sebastian, elusive Pittsburgh buck, has been "hot and cold" this season. A coast critic suggested Bill Corbus, Stanford guard, was below form this year but a few days later Corbus was almost the whole show in beating Southern California. As a sophomore Ed Krause looked like a greater tackle at times than his All-American running mate, Joe Kurth, at Notre Dame, but Krause has been obscured this year in his team's debacle.

The reports nevertheless show a few standouts, for consistency as well as exceptional ability. They include Charles Bernard, Michigan center; Jack Buckler, triple-threat Army halfback; Fred Crawford, Duke tackle; and George Henry Sauer, Nebraska fullback. Any All-American consensus compiled at this stage would certainly include all four of these players but most observers want to study the final returns, especially the results of games this Saturday and next, before they go "out on the limb" to stay with their selections.

That Plaintiff "I"
From many a gridiron sideline comes the plaintif: "If this player was only on a big college, he would be a sure-fire All-American." The leading pro teams furnish evidence that this is probably true but the old ballyhoo still plays a vital part in the business, to the distinct advantage of the major college performer who gets the headlines. For that matter, in nine cases out of ten, the so-called "big leaguers" has to earn any all-star rating he receives and probably deserves it. The spotlight reveals short-comings as well as successes.

The list of all-America candidates to date is by no means complete but the following players have been most prominently mentioned in Associated Press returns:

Unusual Experiences
Northwestern has gone scoreless, something far different from the habits of recent Wildcat teams, against Iowa, Ohio State, Illinois, Minnesota and Stanford. The latter pair of battles went to 0-0 ties.

To match this record, Notre Dame failed to count against Kansas, Pittsburgh, Carnegie Tech, Navy and Purdue. The Kansas game was a scoreless standoff.

In spite of the shortage of points, both teams have piled up big advantages in yardage over their collective opponents. The Irish have taken in about 1,600 yards of territory in six games to about half that number for their adversaries, with startling lack of success. Northwestern's offense has been good 1,100 yards to 650 for opponents, also without doing damage where it would do the most good.

Coach Hearty Anderson has been forced to drill his Irish indoors all week, but has worked to take the damaging kinks out of the offense. Northwestern also has been kept indoors by freezing weather while Coach Dick Hanley has searched for a way of teaching his backs to hang onto the football, a shortcoming which has been more than a little responsible for the Wildcats' failure to score.

AROUND THE BIG TEN
The weather is proving no help to teams preparing for important games. Michigan, Northwestern, Minnesota and Chicago having been chased indoors. Michigan's line stars, Kowalk, Wistert and Savage probably will be able to play at least part of the critical Minnesota game. Bob Tenney, end, injured in the Northwestern game, will be in the Minnesota lineup against the Wolverines. Wisconsin's blocking still fails to please Coach Clarence W. Spears. Ohio State has done most of its work this week in the snow. Although they have won only one game, Northwestern's Wildcats have outscored their six opponents, 5 to 22. Coach Hayes at Indiana is still looking for reserves. Iowa will spring new plays

GRIDDERS GIRDLED FOR SATURDAY'S TILTS

Headlined by Oregon State's invasion of the east and Nebraska's tilt with Pitt, football starts on its last lap next Saturday. Above are some of the stars expected to shine. Left is Frank McDermott, Fordham back, who may crash that "iron man" line of Oregon State; upper center, Frank Larson, who will play a lot of end for Minnesota against Michigan; lower left center, George Sauer, Nebraska's nominee for All-American fullback, who'll hit Pitt's line; lower right center, Mike Mikulak—the Trojans will see a real fullback in Mike; Cy Grant, carrying the ball at right for Georgia, will be pestiferous to Auburn, and lower right is Art Ahonen, Washington's triple-threat back who may shock U. C. L. A.

Burke, Carnegie; Jablonsky, Army; against Purdue Saturday . . . Purdue plans on plenty of passes against the Hawkeyes. Illinois' injured captain, Herman Walser, hopes to play against Chicago, at least a few minutes. It will be his last chance in Memorial Stadium . . . Chicago is spending the whole week on offensive drills.

WILDCATS, IRISH HAVE VERY MUCH TO MOURN ABOUT

Each Have Made More Yardage Than This Year's Opponents

BY WILLIAM WEEKES
Associated Press Sports Writer

Chicago, Nov. 16.—(AP)—Notre Dame and Northwestern, which have much in common in the way of football fortunes—or misfortunes—this year, figure on making an important occasion of their meeting at Dyche Stadium Saturday.

The biggest point of resemblance is that each is suffering through its most unhappy season in years. The Irish have one victory, one tie and four straight defeats on the books. Northwestern has a victory, a pair of ties and three beatings as background for the game.

Each figures that Saturday is the day to get going again, and the contest has stirred up enough interest to indicate a near capacity crowd of around 40,000.

The once high scoring Ramblers have scored in only one game this season. So has Northwestern and both did all their scoring and winning against the same eleven—Indiana, Notre Dame, which met the Hoosiers in the second game of its campaign, won by 12 to 2. Northwestern came along a little later and thumped Indiana 25 to 0.

GREAT GAME IS PREDICTED FOR GRIDIRON FANS

High School And Alumni Should Play To Large Attendance

BY BRADLEY MOLL

Although almost everything is in readiness for the long awaited football game Friday afternoon between the high school Varsity and Alumni teams at the north side athletic field; officials have been secured both squads are getting last minute practice; the equipment has been checked for the final contest; and the sale of tickets proceeds with an outlook for a record attendance at the field. The faculty of the high school has obtained the services of two impartial officials. Elliott Risley will officiate as field judge, Dr. Hugh Burke will umpire the game. D. C. Austin will act as head linesman and Arthur C. Bowers will referee the contest, which places the game in competent hands.

Both sides were non-committal today on the eve of the contest as to the possible outcome. Some statements had been secured however, as follows:

"The game will be a hard fought contest," Athletic Director A. C. Bowers.

"I am impartial in my official capacity and will say no more," D. C. Austin.

"The game should be interesting to all who are interested in football," E. L. Sharpe, assistant coach of high school football squad.

Seek Big Attendance

Coach Lindell was more than non-committal and in his usual manner suggested that everyone wait until after the game and then, he, for one, would give his opinions.

The Alumni squad have voiced their sentiments, but unfortunately the captains desired to have their opinions made public. Both agreed, however, that Friday afternoon's game will be a "battle royal" and another "fight of the century."

Every means is being employed to bring out a record breaking attendance and should this prove successful, it is hoped that the Varsity-Alumni battle may become an annual feature of the high school football schedule. To the fact that all of the scheduled conference games are played on Saturday, has been attributed the poor support of high school football and the game was set for Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock to permit those who cannot attend the Saturday games to display their loyalty and support of this important branch of high school athletics.

CROCODILES WERE REGARDED AS SACRED BY THE ANCIENT EGYPTIANS. THE ANIMALS WERE DECORATED WITH EXPENSIVE JEWELRY... EARRINGS, NECK-LACES AND BRACELETS OF PRECIOUS METALS. THEY WERE BURIED IN ROYAL TOMBS.

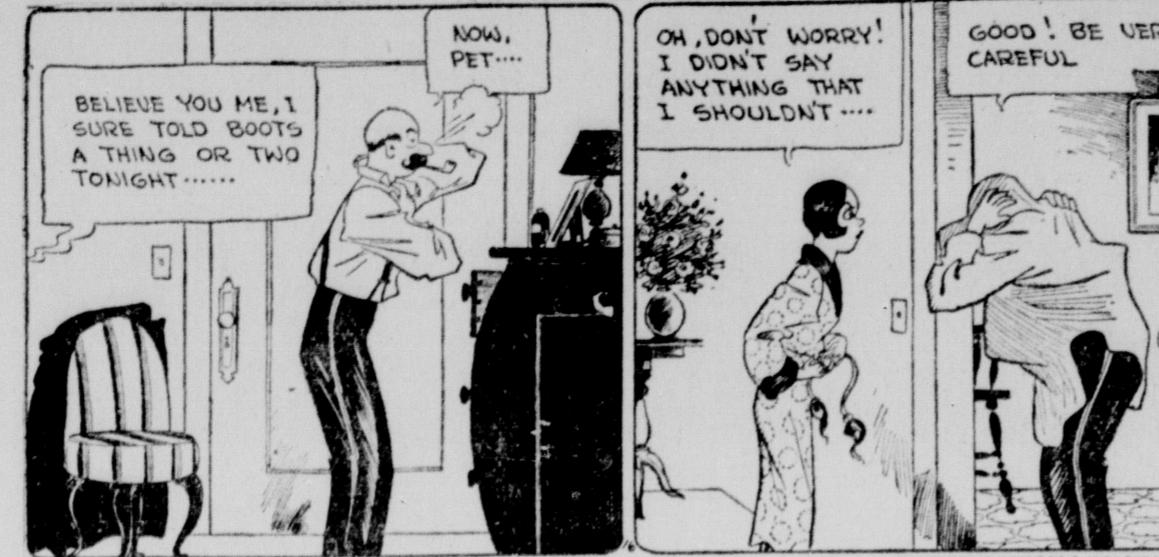

A WESTERN APPLE ORCHARD INCREASED ITS YIELD FROM 1400 BUSHELS TO 6000, AFTER HIVES OF BEES WERE PLACED NEAR THE TREES. THE BEES CARRIED POLLEN FROM BLOSSOM TO BLOSSOM.

THE YEAR 1933 HAS SET A NEW RECORD AS THE WORST HURRICANE YEAR IN HISTORY.

It is difficult to understand why the Egyptians included the crocodile among their sacred animals. In most regions of the world inhabited by this reptile, it is a thoroughly hated creature. Because of its cunning and its ability to approach unnoticed, it takes a heavy toll of human lives every year.

Never, Never Rock This Cradle

BEGIN HERE TODAY

On a stormy November evening DAVID BANNISTER, man-hunting private detective, gives her a lift in the cab in which he is riding. Her handbag opens and he sees a revolver inside.

Next morning Bannister reads that TRACY KING, orchestra leader in a movie theater, has been found dead in his apartment. Tracy had apparently been "known blonde" who visited King the night before. Bannister, remembering the girl in the taxi-cab, is puzzled.

He sees her again that morning. The girl tells him her name is JULIET FRANCE and that she knows nothing of the murder. He goes to see his old friend, JIM PAXTON, editor of the Evening Post, and arranges to work on the King murder case for the Post. Paxton introduces J. RANDOLPH GAINNEY, star reporter. While they talk, the assistant city editor calls. "They've just brought that girl in!"

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VII

DURING the taxi-cab ride to police headquarters, J. Randolph Gainey drew a package of cigarettes from his pocket and held them toward Bannister.

"Have one?" he offered.

Bannister took the cigaret. "This girl?" he said, and then stopped because he could not go on.

The reporter struck a match and held it forward. "Light?" he offered.

Bannister accepted the light.

Gainey touched the match to his own cigaret. "It was fast work!" he commented. "I thought myself all that like about the mysterious blonde suspect was just a stall. Especially when Henley wouldn't give us the description." Gainey's voice was quiet and steady but his eyes had narrowed and the blue in them seemed even brighter.

"Do you think she did it? The girl, I mean?"

The reporter shrugged. "How should I know? Tracy King must have had plenty of girl friends all right. Probably wasn't above giving them dirty deal either."

"The rat!" Gainey spat viciously into the air. "I hate crooners," he said. "That's what this guy King was. As an orchestra leader he was lousy. The dames fell for him because of the way he sang." Gainey's face assumed an expression of distaste. "Lousy!" he murmured softly.

"But why are they so sure the girl did it?"

"That," said the other quietly, "you will have to get from your friend, Police Chief James Adolphus Henley."

The cab turned a corner and a moment more drew up at the curb. Gainey dashed a card in the taxi-driver's face and dashed into the building, followed by Bannister.

"Where's McNeal?" Gainey demanded of the sergeant at the desk.

"Upstairs. They're all up there."

Two steps at a time Gainey mounted the stairs. Bannister was only a few feet behind, his breath coming rapidly. On the second floor the reporter turned left down a corridor. Half way to the end, a door opened ahead of them and a dark figure appeared.

"Cunningham!" Gainey exclaimed. "Where is she?"

THE man in the dark suit nodded. "In there," he said. "Steve Fisher's talking to her."

"So we've got a brunet but the

to hear your side of all this," he was saying.

"There's nothin' doin'!" the officer told him bluntly. "She won't talk to you. I told her when she came here she wouldn't have to talk to reporters."

They disappeared down the stairs. Bannister and Cunningham remained to eye each other.

"Don't think I know your name," Cunningham said apologetically. "Are you a new man?"

BANNISTER nodded. Within the past few minutes he had experienced such a complete emotional let-down that he felt almost giddy. He had come racing to headquarters from the newspaper office, thinking he would find Juliet France there. Juliet France, arrested for murder! He could not explain, even to himself, the tightness in his throat that picture had evoked. He had wanted to help the girl, had promised to help her, and he had failed. The extent of that failure was completely humiliating. It was worse. Now, after seeing the dark-eyed, shrewish Carlotta, Bannister felt such relief that it was a comfort to steady one hand against the wall.

"Yes," he said, "I'm working for the Post temporarily. Bannister's name. Used to work here years ago."

"Know your way around this place?"

"I think so."

Gainey reappeared then, bounding up the steps, as usual, two at a time. "Wow!" he said. "What a handful that dame is!"

Cunningham said, "If you two are going to stay I guess I'll beat it back to the office."

"O. K." agreed Gainey. "Tell Austin I'll call in half an hour."

For the first time Bannister felt something like confidence in what he was about to do. The conviction that he had blundered into something he was certain to regret began to recede.

"Gainey," he said, "there's one thing I'd like to do right away. I'm about eight hours behind the rest of you fellows on all this but I'm going to try to catch up. I suppose you were out at the Shelby Arms this morning and saw the room—I mean King's room where they found his body? I'd like to have a look at that place myself. Windows and doors and all that. Get it in my mind. Do you suppose you could fix it up?"

"Might see the Chief," Gainey suggested. "You said you know him, didn't you?"

Twenty minutes later, with a message signed by Chief Henley in his vest pocket, Bannister set out for the Shelby Arms. But he had an errand to take care of first.

He walked across town to Sixth street, continued until he reached the Hotel Tremont. Entering, he crossed the lobby, picked up one of the house telephones and asked to be connected with Miss Juliet France's room.

There was some delay. The operator couldn't seem to get the name correctly. After that there was a further wait. At last Bannister heard the operator's voice and then a man's. The man said, "I'm sorry. Miss France checked out of the hotel early this afternoon."
